File I/O comes in real time via Direct Attached Storage (DAS) and can be used to pre-record files. It enables powerful recording of camera screens and live monitoring for creation of final content for live playout. The hardware is easy to use with intuitive software editor and extensive XML configuration capabilities. AirBox Neo-20 comes standard with a comprehensive feature set and is ready to quickly start work. At the same time, it also comes with a very comprehensive options file collection, which includes both hardware and software controls. AirBox Neo-20 is programmable and allows the operator to setup any broadcast application within minutes. The operator is free to combine his/her preference with the optional 4K-SDI or HD-SDI connector on AirBox Neo-20. From the outset, AirBox Neo-20 provides an extensive set of video formats for picture and audio compression, bit-rate scaling and real time resizing. It also offers three different types of standard and AES-128, AES-256 and AES-192 compression. AirBox Neo-20 also provides three signal ports for RS-232 remote control. With this, an operator can remotely control up to 18 decoders from an external panel and can use real-time video monitoring or user-defined production workflows. GPI (General Purpose Interface) is a new technology interface to play out and monitor video. Four ports are available on airbox neo-20. X-Port interface and S-video and composite video inputs are supported for live monitoring and recording.
